

Summary:

Animals in the ocean have trouble breathing in water sometimes. They know where they cannot breathe. If they don't know they can still survive. They can change their shell to help them breathe better when they have trouble.